Charles Cary, a True Man
Have You Seen Niagara?
The Grateful Ducks
Drops, Molecules, Atoms

By Arthur Brisbane

BUFFALO, N. Y., Dec. 11—This city mourns the loss of Dr. Charles Cary. Those that attended his funeral yesterday bade farewell to a man upright, courageous, sincere, altogether admirable in character.

His services to his profession, to the science of medicine, distinguished him among his contemporaries. His personal character and innate nobility of mind raised him far above the level of his day.

His death, following so closely upon that of Miss Maria M. Love, his aunt, who recently died in her 92nd year, after more than 70 years of ceaseless devotion to the public welfare, is a great loss to this city and State. Many, past middle age, who have looked upon Charles Cary's face for the last time, must wish that they might inherit part of the fine spirit and unbounded courage of mind and body that made him a hero among men, and a leader everywhere.

Of how many can you say as you may of him, that there was not an act, a word or a thought in his life unworthy of a true man?

In Rome, you go first to St. Peter's, and then to the Church of St. Peter in chains, where Michelangelo's Moses sits in solemn marble, gazing into the future. You visit the Grand Canyon, crossing the continent, and the big trees when you reach California. Here, you hurry to Niagara.

You wonder, as you roll through Main st., past the solid blocks of stores and buildings, which particular lot once held the house in which you were born, when the late Albert Brisbane was building the first "Arcade" building in America, on the site of the present Brisbane Block.

It may encourage Buffalo and other owners of real estate to know that Joseph Ellicott, an associate of Albert Brisbane's father, gave a deed for a piece of land in Buffalo to Albert Brisbane, on the latter's 12th birthday, in 1821, saying to the boy, "Albert, you will live to see that piece of land worth $500." The land now is worth much more than a million dollars, and bargains as good are to be had in many places today, although easily discouraged human beings refuse to believe that anything will ever be worth anything again.

Bound for Niagara, you head toward Tonawanda, driven by William Packer, who has brought from Los Angeles all the fierce, determined salesmanship of that sunny city. He has met you early at the train, and would gladly drive you through to Timbuctoo, to convince you that "After you have seen this newest Chevrolet model, you might as well put your eyes out, for you have nothing left to see."

Signs along the road, with arrows pointing, are marked "Niagara," as they might be marked, "Hoboken," or "Farmingdale." Familiarity breeds contempt.

The river that flows over Niagara's rocky edge is more exciting than it used to be, says Mr. Packer. Bootleggers and hi-jackers that have been beaten to death are allowed to drift over the edge, boat and all. If they are found "it is an accident."

Harbor-working "legitimate" bootleggers that row the liquor across the river from Canada, taking all the risk, are held up by hi-jackers, and the liquor taken from them, after all their toil. Can you imagine what bitterness of spirit this breeds? It causes many "bumpings off."

As you travel with the current, beside the edge of Niagara river, you notice that the water moves a little more swiftly, and see thousands of wild ducks swimming about, dark flocks of them. Nobody shoots them, although they are near enough to shore, because nobody would dare "row out" to get them up. Niagara's fearful brink is too near.

Buzzyan says that hens are grateful to their creator, and proves it, raising their beaks and eyes to the sky, with every swallow of water. How grateful must these ducks be to the creator of Niagara.

Do not lay this sheet aside, fearing that one more description of "Niagara's grandeur," may be forced upon you. This time of depression is no time for such needless cruelty. You have seen a child fall down stairs. Imagine a river, carrying all the Great Lakes, falling down a precipice, creating millions of horse power, as it drops and describe it in your mind, to suit yourself. No human mind can grasp or describe anything

GIRL WAS LED BY LOVE, NOT KIDNAPED

Disillusionment in Montreal Is Disclosed; She Went Hungry and Suffered Hardships

Esther Pitts' Diary on Page 16

By BERT FORD
(Boston Evening American Correspondent)

Burlington, Vt., Dec. 11—Love, and an awakening to disillusionment—worry, and an urge but courageous attempt of a sweet young college girl to save her family—that is the story behind the five-day disappearance of Esther Pitts, Vermont University co-ed.

It is not a story of kidnaping.

The story related by the 20-year-old sophomore following her reappearance in Montreal yesterday was disproved by investigation and admissions today.

The real story, complete in its major details, was revealed to county and private investigators for the first time.

The principal reaction from it is a whole-hearted admiration for every hand for a girl who sought to save her family from knowledge that was bound to hurt them.

HER DESPERATE PLIGHT.

Driven to desperation, she sought to do this by her flight to Montreal with $3.15 in her pocketbook.

4 BANDITS GET CASH AT GUN POINT

Gulf Refinery Auto Is Trailed From Bank to Refinery Plant, Then Robbed

Picture on Page 13

In a daring daylight holdup today, four bandits escaped with a payroll of $3000 outside the Gulf Refining Co. plant, Roland st., East Somerville.

They followed Chief Clerk Raleigh Moore of York st., Cambridge, and John E. Calley of Glenwood av., Malden, a clerk, from the Somerville National Bank, Bow st.

Forcing the coupe of the clerks' against the curb, two of the thugs leaped from the bandit machine, one of whom thrust an army automatic at Calley, who was driving.

GET CAR NUMBER

"Give us the dough," the other one said, without waiting, reached between Moore and Calley to take the bag of money.

The driver of the bandit car and another man stayed in the machine during the holdup and then the quartet careened through Roland st. into Cambridge st., and were lost to view as they headed toward Sullivan sq., Charlestown.

Moore told police the car was behind them when they turned from the bank building into Union sq., Somerville. It followed through Washington st., and turned with them into Charles and Roland sts.

ALARM BROADCAST

They were becoming suspicious, Moore said, when suddenly the bandit car swerved ahead and cut the coupe into the curb.

He said the fleeing machine carried registration "Mass. 738,120" and was a green sedan.

The plates were stolen from the machine of Dorothy H. Gustin of 266 West Newton st., Back Bay, according to Boston police.

It sent a cordon of police into the streets of Charlestown and special watch to the Northern Artery, main outlet from Boston and Somerville.

Sergt.-Inspector Daniel M. O'Connell, Inspector John J. Smith and Patrolmen McDonald and Cummings of the Somerville police were sent to the scene.

The robbery was perfectly timed, police said, but might have been thwarted if the usual crowd of employes had been in evidence around the plant entrance.

CARGO OF RUM SEIZED HERE

Firing a volley of rifle shots, customs officers aboard the patrol boat 463 halted a 50-foot rum speedboat in the harbor, just outside Dorchester Bay, today, arrested three men and seized $20,000 worth of Christmas liquor.

The seizure followed another prize capture last night off Gloucester, where a rum boat with 100 cases, bound for Boston, was overhauled after a long chase.

The speedy craft captured today has been hardly two weeks in the service, having been rushed to completion at Bath, Maine.

The crew of the vessel made a desperate effort to get away.

Slinking into the harbor with no lights, the craft, which carries the designation CG-1209, was sighted shortly before daybreak.

As soon as the men aboard the speedboat saw the customs craft, they whirled about and darted out of the bay, but the government boat continued on on the trail.

A volley was fired but the liquor-laden boat, its engines racing, kept on.

In back of Thompson's Island, the customs men sent a volley of rifle shots across the runaway, and the rum crew promptly quit.

The liquor, 400 cases of mixed brands was taken to the appraisers' stores and the arrested men to the office of Deputy Collector of Customs Thomas Finigan.

In the seizure off Gloucester last night four men were arrested. The boat captured is the Alliburton.

The seizure was made by the coast guard rum chaser 179, out of the Gloucester base.

6 SEIZE, SHOOT WARDEN, FLEE

Leavenworth, Kan. Dec. 11—Six desperate convicts made a sensational escape from Leavenworth federal penitentiary today and shot and seriously wounded Warden Thomas B. White, who was taken as a hostage.

White was brought to a hospital here. It was reported amputation of his left arm, struck with a shotgun charge when he wrestled with his captors, was necessary.

Soldiers from Ft. Leavenworth, prison guards, police and sheriff's officers pursued the fugitives, who were armed with pistols and shotguns.

The wounded warden was left on a road about eight miles southwest of here. His captorsc ommandeered three motor cars in succession.

All of the fugitives are desperate robbers and gunmen.

Mrs. Joseph Gates, wife of a farmer, reported that her daughter, Elizabeth, and son, John, had been taken prisoner by the convicts after the men had terrorized the Gates home.

Shortly afterward she said, Warden White and the girl attempted to escape. When White was shot, she said, the convicts also fired on Elizabeth, but she escaped injury by falling into a ditch.

Mrs. C. D. Campbell, a neighbor, said the convicts visited her farm and stole two horses.

Soldiers from Ft. Leavenworth armed with machine guns, prison guards and county and city officers rushed to the scene.

BILLS TO MODIFY DRY LAW CHEERED IN CONGRESS

DEMOCRAT AND REPUBLICAN JOIN DRIVE

Senate and House Measures Demand Drastic Reforms to Legalize Beer

Washington, Dec. 11 (INS)—Appeals for modification of the Volstead act drew applause in the House today as the first prohibition debate of the session got under way.

In the Senate the wets have initiated an attack upon the alleged criminalities of enforcement, and the arbitrary restrictions of the Volstead act.

Taking command of the Senate movement, Senator Huey (D.) of Mississippi has introduced four bills.

One would remove all limitations on prescription of liquor for medicinal purposes by licensed physicians.

WOULD BOND DRY AGENTS

The others would remove the definition of what constitutes intoxicating liquor. Give to each state the money for alcoholic contents and bond dry agents against illegal acts.

"These bills," the Senator declared, "would bring the Volstead Act into conformity with the Eighteenth Amendment and remove much of the private and official graft brought about by prohibition."

Bonding of dry agents, he said, is necessary to put a curb on illegal killings an violation of property rights.

The drive in the House for legalization of beer started with bipartisan pleas by Rep. William E. Hull (R.) and Rep. Adolph Sabath (D.), both of Illinois.

Declaring that Congress can consistently modify the Volstead act despite the 18th amendment, they maintained that manufacture of beer would provide hundreds of millions for the treasury, aid the farmers and end rebellion against prohibition.

"The farmers of the nation have been blind to their own interests for many years," said Sabath. "Cutting off beer has prived them of great markets.

"They have followed the parties of Mr. Coolidge and President Hoover even though they knew they were not sincere in their views on prohibition."

Hull said that legalizing beer would raise the average price of grains. He rents a bushel and a tax of $5 a barrel on beer would provide revenue of $330,000,000 a year.

"What's that?" asked the officer.

Tiernan filled a glass with all the assortments of alleged liquor he could find in the place.

Gibbons Finds Fortifications at All Important Points on Railroad

Mukden, Dec. 11—Japan is in Manchuria to stay. Railroad bridges and tunnels bristle with firmly established permanent defenses. Gray reinforced cement "pill-boxes" with ominous black portholes on all sides and surrounded by gray steel armorplated turrets with revolving machine guns mount guard at bridgehead positions where the railroad from Korea to Mukden crosses a river or ravine.

Larger blockhouses similarly equipped with the possible addition of mounts for small calibre field pieces dominate the smokegrimed mouths of each tunnel through the mountains.

Chinese customs and immigration officials board the rear of the train at Antung, the first Chinese border town on the Yalu River and make a show of inspecting baggage and passports, but the ground on which this railroad runs appears as much under the control and in possession of the Japanese as the Panama Canal zone belongs to Uncle Sam.

SCENERY OF WAR

Railroad stations resemble miniature fortresses, fully equipped with castelated battlements, observation towers and Japanese sentries in high fur hats.

In the seat behind mine on the train was a Japanese mother, knitting woolen khakicolored woolen sock as American mothers did 15 years ago.

In the seat ahead, a Japanese officer studied a map. A young uniformed aide, smartly dressed, wore an 18-inch leather case containing a sharp steel knife. The officer returned salutes as we passed through stations.

YOUNG SOLDIERS EAGER

In a modern dining car, half a dozen young soldiers accepted an invitation to my table. We drank beer and tea and ate sandwiches. They tried to outdo one another seeing which could eat the most hot foreign mustard without getting watery eyes. They talked about life and death, and vowed that death for Japan was better than survival in this scrap.

really great, just as no half-pint can hold Lake Superior.

What pain, anguish, boiling pitch, freezing, lowest depth, would Dante have invented for him who built the hideous bright yellow brick skyscraper—Tower Hotel that dwarfs and belittles the American falls. As you look at them from Goat Island, nothing in the inferno would be bad enough for him and even sawing the body lengthwise, a punishment favored by the late Chinese empress, would not deal adequately with the other, that built a tall, mean building and turned the dead rough wall, with its airshaft and tiny windows, toward the cataract.

Such a soul would paste up a west coast advertisement on the side of the Taj Mahal.

You are dazed at first as you stand by the roar and rumble of the Horseshoe Falls, masses of fearful weight tumbling, bellowing, never ceasing their awful power.

Then reflection restores peace. You think "all that roar is only so many separate drops falling. All that power means small drops, going the same way. What could human drops do, if they went the same way, worked together and combined forces."

For your further comfort and recovery of equilibrium, you say to yourself that you are watching clumsy, cumbersome power, that will seem as old fashioned as an ox cart when men harness the tides, the sun, and ultimately release atomic forces. Those Niagara drops are molecules. In which atoms of hydrogen and oxygen are yoked together, two of the former hitched to one of the latter, like two mules harnessed with one horse. Each atom is a solar system, and two teaspoonfuls of those atoms have locked up in them, says Eddington, power enough to drive the biggest steamship across the Atlantic and back again.

The atoms reeling over that precipice in one second carry down to the sea, locked up in their whirling electronic mechanism, more power than Niagara can develop in ten years. And they have carried that power within them for billions of years, untouched, undiminished.

You conclude that you, able to think, quote, and almost understand Jeans, Eddington and Einstein, are the really important molecule and continue on your way, through "Queen Victoria Park," on past Chippewa, to the bridge and across to "God's Country." You immediately recognize it when customs officials "frisk" your automobile to make sure you are not smuggling.

Senator Borah Objects to War Debt Revision

By Universal Service

Washington, Dec. 11—William E. Borah, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, issued the following statement on President Hoover's special message on debt revision:

"I favored the one-year moratorium because I thought it necessary to give Europe an opportunity to adjust matters and establish a sound economic program.

"But I am not in favor of any further extension of the moratorium, and I am not in favor of readjusting these debts upon a basis of capacity to pay. Europe has not up to this time availed herself of the moratorium to adjust those matters which it is necessary to adjust before there can be any economic recovery in Europe.

Senator Borah

"I am not in favor of re-creating the World War Foreign Debt Commission. There is no business for it to transact.

"I do not see any evidence that Europe proposes to reduce armaments or that she proposes to adjust reparations upon any proper basis.

"We adjusted the debts on the basis of capacity to pay and cancelled about seven billion dollars of obligations. Under the present policies pursued in Europe, another readjustment on a basis of capacity to pay would about wipe out the debts."

Mrs. Johnson is alleged to have admitted ownership of the revolver, which was found on a public dump and connected with the crime through the expertness of Capt. Charles Van Amburgh of the Massachusetts state police.

VOWED HIS LOVE

"A sensational and astounding statement will be read in court," said County Attorney Marden, referring to the alleged confession of Mrs. Johnson.

According to Marden, Mrs. Johnson said that Merton Levine told her:

"I will not let anything or anybody come between us."

"She said that she was desperately in love with the youth," continued Marden. "That's all I can say just at present."

He admitted, however, that he was convinced that the housekeeper was the cause of the murder.

From another official source it was learned that Mrs. Johnson said in her confession that Merton told her he had killed and was deeply sorry for it.

"We were in the living room about two weeks before the killing, and Merton told me he would kill his brother if he interfered," she is alleged to have stated, adding: "I kept quiet until now because I loved him."

Morrison is alleged to have admitted that he purchased the revolver in a Portland pawnshop and turned it over to Mrs. Johnson.

MRS. CULBERTSON FEELS LUCK WILL SOON BREAK THEIR WAY

'PSYCHIC' BLUFF BID FAILS

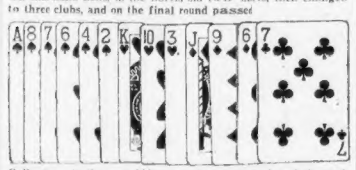
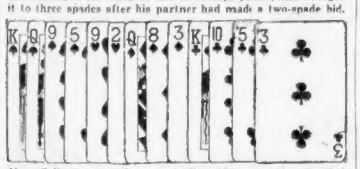
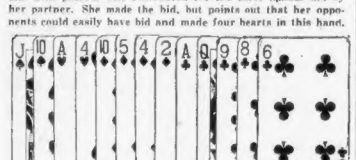
On this hand Lenz, in the north, bid two hearts, then changed to three clubs, and on the final round passed



Culbertson, in the west, bid one no trump, passed, and changed it to three spades after his partner had made a two-spade bid.



Mrs. Culbertson, on the east, dealing, bid two spades, doubled and then passed. She contracted for the three spades bid by her partner. She made the bid, but points out that her opponents could easily have bid and made four hearts in this hand.



Jacoby, in the south, started with a bid of one club and then passed on the next three times.

SERIES' FIRST REDOUBLE

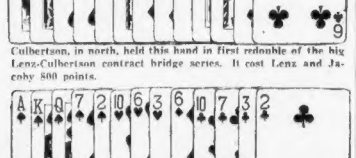
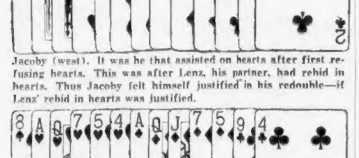
Culbertson, in north, held this hand in first redouble of the big Lenz-Culbertson contract bridge series. It cost Lenz and Jacoby 800 points.



Jacoby (west). It was he that assisted on hearts after first refusing hearts. This was after Lenz, his partner, had rebid in hearts. Thus Jacoby felt himself justified in his redouble—if Lenz' rebid in hearts was justified.



Lenz (east) was the dealer of the first redoubled hand. It was the 76th of the series. They were set three tricks in this heart battle.

Mrs. Culbertson (south) did a good job of passing in this historic hand of last night's play. She bid one spade at first, but passed each time it came to her after that. The bidding in this hand was as follows: Lenz, 1 heart; Mrs. Culbertson, 1 spade; Jacoby, double; Culbertson, 2 clubs; Lenz, 2 diamonds; Mrs. Culbertson, pass; Jacoby, 2 hearts; Culbertson, pass; Lenz, 3 hearts; Mrs. Culbertson, pass; Jacoby, 4 hearts; Culbertson, double; Lenz, pass; Mrs. Culbertson, pass; Jacoby, redouble; Culbertson, pass; Lenz, pass; Mrs. Culbertson, pass. Neither side was vulnerable. The ace of clubs was led by Mrs. Culbertson.

Sure They'll Hold Their Share of Honors Before Tournament Is Ended

This is another in the series of articles written by Mrs. Josephine Culbertson, wife of Ely Culbertson and with him originator of the approach-forcing system of contract bidding, on the match being played between the Culbertsons and Sidney S. Lenz and Oswald Jacoby. Today Mrs. Culbertson tells of the play in the third session of the dramatic bridge battle.

World's Greatest Woman Bridge Player. Written especially for the Boston Evening American

New York, Dec. 11—The play last night, the third session of the 150-rubber match between my husband and myself, as representatives of the approach-forcing system of contract bridge, and Sidney S. Lenz and Oswald Jacoby, as representatives of the official system, was by far the most spectacular thus far.

Although our opponents held but a slight preponderance of the honor-tricks, the imp of finessing worked overtime in their favor.

I do not wish to be put in a position of lamenting our bad luck—far from it. Luck has a way of evening itself up and I feel quite sure that before the end of the contest we will have our share.

At the end of the third session we had played in all 16 rubbers, six of them last night. During this session we reduced our opponents lead 260 points, and they will start the session tonight with a lead of 1835 points, having won 10 rubbers out of 16.

"PSYCHIC" BIDS

My opponents and my partner were all alert to grasp the slightest opening.

Mr. Jacoby, in keeping with his reputation, put up a relentless barrage of "psychic" or bluff bids. They were so obvious to be very effective. Ely counter-attacked with light, "semi-psychic" bids and they were also ineffective, except in the following instance:

DIVA VANISHES, FEAR SUICIDE

New York, Dec. 11 (US)—On the eve of her first major performance on the stage of the Metropolitan Opera Company, Mme. Santo Biondo, lyric soprano, vanished strangely after writing letters saying she was going to end her life, it has been revealed.

Mme. Biondo, who was 28, was to have sung the role of Manuela in "La Notte Di Zoraima," yesterday honoring Rosa Ponselle and other stars.

She was last seen at 11 p. m. on Wednesday when she walked out of the Hotel Plaza annex, carrying several letters. Two of these were received by Enrico Rosati, who trained her voice. One of them read:

"I have lived a life of lies. I tried to commit suicide by gas, sat down by the stove and turned on the gas jets. But I couldn't go through with it. So now I have decided to end my life in the waters."

Rosati and detectives went to Mme. Biondo's suite and found it in disorder. Clothing was strewn around the room, all lights were on and the windows open.

Rosati is a brother of the singer he found in New Haven where relatives live. Her father, Mauro Biondo is seriously ill.

The thug, who fled with her money, struck her several times on the head with an iron bar, and it is believed the blows would have killed her but for the fact that her hair is long and thick.

Police found this iron bar with which bandit attacked Miss Taylor just as she was about to unlock the door of her home. The blows rained on her head made her almost unconscious, but her screams brought aid just as the thug fled with her money, house keys, eye-glasses and other belongings in handbag.

HER FIRST MATE CONVICTED OF MURDER, TOO

Mrs. Powers and Sister, Also in Matrimonial Agency, Face Bitter, Impoverished Future

By MARGARET LANE
International News Correspondent
Copyright, 1931, by the International News Service.

Clarksburg, W. Va., Dec. 11 (INS)—Pitiful last victims of Harry Power's crimes, his wife and her sister, are clinging together in their shuttered house, lying together sleepless in a darkened room and listening fearfully for every knock on the door.

Powers, meanwhile, chews gum and paces calmly in his cell waiting for the morrow when Judge Southern will pronounce the date of his execution on the gallows for the murder of Mrs. Dorothy Pressler Lemke of Northboro, Mass.

All through the trial Mrs. Powers has given out that she was sick and could not appear in court.

I visited her a few hours after the verdict had been returned against her husband and found her sick indeed—sick at heart, and shaken in mind. She was lying in bed under a striped counterpane; it was already dark and the bedroom light flickered in her eyes.

Her sister, Miss Eva Strother, who has lived with Powers and his wife for several years, was coolly unemotional and spoke crisply.

IF HE WERE YOURS?

"She's had a terrible time," she said, gesturing at the sobbing figure on the bed. "But at least the suspense is over now. People say we may consider ourselves lucky . . . but . . . well, you know, I don't like to say anything."

Mrs. Powers uncovered her head and looked at us. Her pale face was tear-streaked, but her hair was neatly tucked up under a net.

"Suspense?" she said. "Would you say the suspense was over if it were your husband? If your husband were to be hanged?"

"Wouldn't you pray the Lord you might go to Heaven before him?"

Gradually she became calm and began to ask questions about the last day of the trial. She had not known of the verdict until some hours after her husband had been convicted, and a neighbor had arrived to break the news to the two drab, unhappy women sitting behind the shutters above their little shop.

She shook her head confusedly over her husband's treachery. The smaller lies in his testimony seemed to strike her most.

"Why did he give his age as 39?" she asked. "He's 45 if he's a day."

MUST LOVE HIM"

She smiled a little tearfully and protested in a faint voice that she still loved him.

"You can't help loving your husband, can you?" she said, as if it were an incurable ill. "I don't know why he said in court he wasn't happy with me. I don't know as ever we used to fight. My only fault is I've been an invalid 15 years. I was an invalid when I married him. When I married him he had $10,000 in cash."

Police Chief C. A. Duckworth was with us. He told Miss Strother that on the day of his arrest Powers had written to five other women, making engagements, and also to his matrimonial agency, asking for some names. Miss Strother (who also is a member of a matrimonial club) shook her head regretfully and shrugged her shoulders.

"It is very hard," she said, "to lose all your money as we have done to that man. It was our money that went to build the garage at Quiet Dell, and he has used so much of our money and borrowed so much without paying back that our little property is dwindled almost to nothing. I don't know what will become of us."

"Sixteen hundred and fifty dollars," said Mrs. Powers, from the bed. "Do you think I shall ever get it back again?"

SECOND MURDER MATE

Lucella Strother Powers has had a married life stranger than gruesome fiction.

At 17 she married a man who was tried for the murder of a man he killed in a quarrel. She divorced him in 1914 and lived under her maiden name until, seven years ago, she fell into the hands of the mass murderer, whose five discovered crimes have brought him at last face to face with the gallows.

She has lived—outwardly happy and ordinary—with a man whose crimes were destroying other women and their children, murdering and burying them in the garage built with her savings. She has seen the clothing of those women hanging in her closet, but here is not a mind to jump to sharp conclusions, or even to question the strange husband the matrimony bureau found for her.

Now she lies crying in the shuttered room, among the woolen crochet mats and oleographs of little girls with kittens, and murmurs about her troubles to her eldest sister, who goes the round of the dark house and lies in darkness rather than let a ray of light betray them through the shutters.

CURLEY DEATH CASE DELAYED

Accompanied by Corporation Counsel Samuel Silverman, Jas. Curley, 16, son of Mayor Curley, appeared in Roxbury Court today to question him in connection with the accident in which Miss Sally Bean, 45, was fatally injured in an auto operated by the youth.

Special Officer John McGuire of the Back Bay station told the court the police did not wish to file a complaint at this time and the hearing was set over until next Wednesday.

News of the accident at Huntington ave. and Forsyth st., was made public last night following the woman's death at City Hospital where she had been confined since last Saturday.

Police declared they would present the facts to the court to determine whether a warrant should be issued on a technical charge of manslaughter.

According to the police report, the youth was operating his own auto a recent birthday gift, from a function at the Boston Latin school, where he is a student.

At Forsyth st. and Huntington ave. the woman stepped from the curb and was struck before Curley could bring the car to a stop. A passing activist rushed her to the City Hospital.

Police say young Curley was driving at a moderate rate of speed and that the accident, apparently, could not be avoided.

"But I can find your money," said the burglar, "I would like to count that."

"But it really doesn't matter, and, besides, I must be hurrying along," answered the burglar.

As a matter of fact I am quite good in finding money."

Rathbun: "I'll tell you what I'll do. I'll get up and find for you whatever money you need."

Burglar: "But I can find our money. I'll do all the necessary work. After all, I'm the burglar and not you."

Then Mrs. Rathbun entered the conversation.

"If he promises not to try to hurt you would you let him get it for you," she timidly inquired.

The police minister agreed and Rathbun went to a pocket of his trousers to extract approximately $60.

"Excuse me," he said on second thought, after passing the money, "Don't hurry," said Rathbun. "Where do you come from, anyway?"

"Why do you ask?"

"You impress me I might want to put you on my payroll some time."

KNEW HIS STUFF

"Oh, that's alright. Don't put yourself out for me. Burglaring is my game and there is no payroll."

With that, the burglar politely excused himself for the "inconvenience" and departed via the front door.

In his report to police Mrs. Rathbun said he "didn't care whether they ever caught that burglar. He knew his stuff."

BRITISH BUDGET WILL 'BALANCE'

London, Dec. 11 (AP)—Neville Chamberlain, chancellor of the exchequer, said today there was no ground for imagining there will be any serious deficit in the British budget this year and still less for believing the budget will not be balanced in 1932.

The chancellor's statement, made in reply to criticism from the opposition in the House of Commons, added that while every practical step will be taken at the earliest possible moment to stabilize the pound.

Foreigners who took their balances away at the present level of the pound and incurred losses, he prophesied would some day regret it and find that their action was entirely unnecessary.

Basically, Mr. Chamberlain said, most of Great Britain's financial troubles are linked with the question of reparation settlements in which the problem of war debts is interwoven.

Should Brighten Life of Poor T. B. M.

London, Ont., Dec. 11 (AP)—Secretaries should not wear red on busy days because it distracts their employes' attention, says Miss Margaret Keyes, lecturer on secretarial science.

Moreover, "the private secretary does not powder her nose or pat her hair continually." Miss Keyes warns, according to an article in the University of Western Ontario's Gazette, student publication. "One application in the morning and one in the afternoon should be sufficient."

The tired business man, she says must have a companionable secretary "who will blend her personality with the humdrum of industry to brighten the monotony of life." Business men like "black dresses with fluffy collars and cuffs."

"If the board of directors is meeting," says the expert, "the private secretary should make a special effort to look her best. Older men are very impressionable."

CULBERTSONS SURE SYSTEM WILL WIN

permitted to play the contract at 5 spades, for a gain of 90 points for us, our opponents could have made 4 hearts without difficulty.

The session was interspersed with arguments more or less fatuitous between the players. In these I did not join, because I do not like arguments. After hand 64, for instance, a very interesting point in play was raised when Mr. Lenz protested because he thought my fourth hand had taken too much time to play it fairly.

"It's a very difficult hand," Ely replied, "I must re-establish both opponents' hands. However, if we want to save time, tell me what you have."

LOSES ON GUESS

Unceremoniously the suggestion would save a good deal of time on many hands but unfortunately for Mr. Lenz, while scientific, it did not comply, and my husband went down one trick through a most unfortunate guess in a five-diamond contract.

Another hand in the first rubber furnished a spectacular bid of the "optional" type, which is part of the official system, but which plays of the approach-forcing system in regard as useless when it works and costly when it fails.

As a result of the opening two-spade bid on this hand, a four-spade contract was reached, which was defeated two tricks. The hand and bidding follow:

I have never seen a session remotely like it, so long and interesting hands as that of last night.

The session was also notable in the fact that a method of the bidding played resulted in defeated contracts. Of course, many of these defeats were defeats only in appearance, as by taking proportionate penalties players had prevented their adversaries from making greater scores at their own bid.

FIRST REDOUBLE

It was the third rubber of the evening and the 12th of the session that brought the first redoubled contract. It was a contract of four hearts played by Mr. Lenz, which was doubled by my husband and redoubled by Mr. Jacoby. The result was a set of three tricks for our opponents for a total of 800 points.

This was the heaviest penalty taken by either side during the evening.

Mr. Lenz's rebid was extremely doubtful and Mr. Jacoby's redouble was certainly unjustified.

Lenz Cries 'Foul,' Charges Ely Breaks Own Rules

By J. C. OESTREICHER

New York, Dec. 11 (INS)—The Old World politeness which has distinguished the Lenz-Culbertson tourney to date went into the discard today.

Play was not completed until 1:25 a. m. due in part to delays resulting from several objections by Lenz to Culbertson's elbow bidding on more than one occasion, necessitating recall of the voluminous contract signed by the players when they first agreed to meet in the most spectacular tournament in card history. Lenz also accused the Culbertsons of swerving from the hard and fast rules of their approach-forcing system, stoutly maintaining there was nothing in the Culbertson "blue book" allowing Culbertson to raise his partner's bid "when he held only a doubleton in her suit."

START EARLY TODAY

The game is so far behind schedule that play will begin today at 3 p. m., with an interval for dinner, and continue until after midnight, leaving more time for bridge and slam for argumnts if necessary.

The first session was an interesting one. The distribution was as follows:

CULBERTSON (North)
S—Q 8 4
H—J 9
D—K 4 6 2
C—K Q 10 8

| JACOBY (West) | (LENZ (East) |

| H—K 8 5 | S—K J 3 |

Bidding (neither side vulnerable)

| South | West | North | East |
|---|---|---|---|
| Pass | 1 Spade | 1 N. T. | 2 Spades |
| 3 Hearts | Pass | 4 Hearts | Pass |
| Pass | Pass | Pass | Pass |

Lenz's objection was to the fact that Culbertson had raised his wife's three-heart bid to four, while he possessed only the Jack and nine. He vigorously maintained that the "Blue Book" setting forth correct play in the approach-forcing system makes no provision for a raise of this sort when only two trumps are held.

NO PROOF YET

It almost led to a showdown, for any major digression by either team from the system which each is playing in an attempt to prove its superiority over the other, might invalidate the whole tournament. The referees were unable to settle the argument, and as time was growing short, Lenz and Jacoby were forced to be content with having set their opponents three tricks on what looked like a sure-fire contract.

Experts and observers agreed alike today that so far the tournament has not supplied a decisive test for either system. Lenz and Jacoby point with pride to the fact that the only slam bid made so far was accomplished by their team, but the distribution of hands so far from being such that expert playing by either system would have had much the same result.

Culbertson, champion of "psychic" bidding and redoubling, has made more than one coup by this means, but an equal number of times his strategy has been accurately gauged by the Culbertson's and diverted to their own advantage.

LENZ LEAD CUT; BRIDGE BATTLE GETS ROUGH

New York, Dec. 11 (AP)—In sensational contract bridge peppered with poker, Mr. and Mrs. Ely Culbertson gained 260 points on Sidney S. Lenz and Oswald Jacoby today.

The third session of the marathon test of rival systems ended in the wee sma hours with Lenz and Jacoby plus 1815, in contrast to 2075 at the start of the session.

THE MISSUS SAVES DAY.

At one time during play lasting more than six hours the lead was only 415. The Culbertsons minus might have gone above 3000 but for a heavy bid-boosting double by Mrs. Culbertson on the last hand of the session, the 109th hand of the day.

Six rubbers were played in the session, each side winning three and making the rubbers of the series stand Lenz and Jacoby 10, Culbertsons 6. Lenz thought the Culbertsons had much the better cards in the third session. Their aces and kings totaled 55 to 49 for the Lenz pair, Lenz was free in criticism of Culbertson as slow.

The "battle of the century" became a battle royal, Lenz and Jacoby last night with kicking on the shins the only thing barred.

EAT AND SLEEP

Culbertson—expert that he is—was no safer from the wrath of the missus than any ordinary guilty He waited to eat while the played and he ordered up the biggest steak he could call to mind.

"Ely," reminded Mrs. Culbertson, "we are playing cards, you know. Can't you wait until after the hand."

"No!" said Culbertson, and he went on eating with one hand and playing with the other.

"Ely!" said Mrs. Culbertson, just a little sharply.

Mr. Culbertson continued his eating. Another hand was dealt. Mrs. Culbertson was about to bid. Mr. Culbertson cut off a piece of steak.

No word from Mrs. Culbertson—but she looked across the green felt with the look that expert players of a glower. Mr. Culbertson quit eating.

Now was expert Lenz, defender of the official system, any safer from a good walloping down from his partner than an expert bid repulsed in the red.

POST MORTEMS, TOO

There were post mortems, too, just like any poker game, and Lenz's oft-said, "Let's get going," couldn't stop them. And sometimes the conversation was polite and sometimes it wasn't. As, for instance, when Mr. Culbertson said to Mr. Lenz, "May I see that last trick again?" and Mr. Lenz answered, "Gladly, my over-eyed hear" with what may be described as an upside-down smile.

Omens and good luck pieces crawled into the game last night. Mrs. Culbertson put a rabbit's foot in her purse. Culbertson hung a wishbone on the bridge lamp and Oswald Jacoby, Lenz's partner, had a finger decorated with antiseptic.

Oosie—that's a journalistic liberty, but it is, after all, a sporting event—got the finger decoration through a little Park ave. heroism as he walked to the battle arena. A nondescript pup was run over by an automobile. Oosie picked him up, carried him off the street and farther danger and got bit on the hand.

The Culbertsons were more enthusiastic than ever over their system, with specific examples among them a hand in which Lenz essayed a four-heart contract, was doubled and Jacoby redoubled.

The contract was set three, the Culbertsons gaining 400 points right there on the 78th hand of the series and the first hand of rubber 13. Temporarily, they cut their deficit to the lowest since the first rubber ended, 415. Lenz rebid his hearts without an assist from his partner and then Jacoby raised the contract to four. He expressed his opinion quite shortly about the rebid and insisted his trouble was justified.

POKER BRIDGE FAILS

Poker bridge, or bluff bidding, is sometimes a boomerang, and such was the case with that hand. Lenz by his rebid was essaying to force the Culbertsons into a poor situation.

On the first hand of the session Jacoby got the Culbertsons into an impossible contract by bluff-raising hand original bid. His hand was only about half as strong in honors as it should be. But the Culbertsons that Culbertson bid no trump over Jacoby's spade and eventually escaped game and was down two. Culbertson once made a bluff bid of two no trumps which drove Lenz into an impossible three-heart contract.

In the hole on the sixteenth rubber the Culbertsons successfully tried the tactics their opponents had hitherto used with skill, namely taking sets deliberately in order to win the rubber. And on the final hand Culbertson made game and two tricks over in spades when holding only four spades headed by nine deuce. Mrs. Culbertson's hand, both sides vulnerable, follows:

NORTH (Lenz) DEALER

SOUTH (Jacoby)
S—J 10

C—J 9 3

Lenz bid a club, Culbertsonites probably would have passed such a hand, Mrs. Culbertson with three honor tricks and a two suiter doubled indicating a wish that partner bid his best suit. Jacoby redoubled. It was a bluff. Such a bid usually indicates that the redoubler is prepared to set almost any bid. Culbertson passed and Mrs. Culbertson gladly assisted the spades, bidding two. Jacoby carried his bluffing no farther and Culbertson went to four spades. He knew from the double by Mrs. Culbertson that she had at least three honor tricks. He had "2½ plus" honor tricks. The total honor trick count put him in the game zone so he felt no misgivings about the spade suit. The king of clubs was led by Lenz. He failed to lead them a second time in fear of a ruff and Culbertson made six easily.

On the 106th hand of the series Mrs. Culbertson was set two doubled when vulnerable and lost 600 points. It was during the prolonged 18th rubber. The Culbertsons felt justified, for when all the cards were known, they thought it would have been a lapdown at two no trump for the enemy. The official score quiet content indeed.

Here is the hand, East and West vulnerable:

North bid a diamond, East two spades, South doubled and all passed. The first lead was the ace of diamonds. Mrs. Culbertson regarded it as a wreck on the rocks of freak distribution. On the fifth hand of the series in the 11th rubber, East and West having set below the line, the only score Lenz was set four on a bid of three spades when Jacoby took him out of a double.

Here is the hand:

D—Q 3
C—Q 9 6 2

North bid a spade, east two hearts, south passed, west three diamonds, north doubled, east passed, and south bid three spades. Whether Jacoby should have left Lenz in the double provoked more argument. Jacoby felt the Culbertsons' part score justified the set as he feared the Culbertsons would make their three diamonds. The Culbertsons felt their tickets made a double of the spades risky. The lead was the diamond 10.

Ely's Bets Now Total $14,200

New York, Dec. 11 (AP)—Lenz brought Ely Culbertson an offer from a friend last night who wanted to bet $10,000 on the outcome of the bridge match. Culbertson said that if Lenz's friend would be so kind as to send up a certified check it would be immediately covered with one for $20,000.

The Culbertson confidence so far totals $14,200 against approximately $3450. The wager in the agreement with Lenz is $5000 to $2000, winnings to go to charity. He has $1500 against $750 from Jacoby, $1000 against $500 from a man in San Francisco, $300 against $100 from a man in Newark, N. J., and another $6000 at varying odds.

His confidence at times last night was at low ebb. After one bid set he was moved to exclaim:

"Just one bad break after another!"

SLEUTH CHIEF CALLED TO TELL OF $35,000

New York, Dec. 11 (INS)—Police Commissioner Mulrooney ordered Deputy Chief Inspector Thomas J. Kelly, in charge of Queens Borough, to explain the mysterious $35,000 deposits in banks he testified before the Hofstadter legislative committee he could not account for.

The order came after Richard A. Frederico, former Bronx plain clothesman, had testified that policemen had been instructed to protect speakeasies displaying the card of the Liberty League, an organization believed to have been formed when the old Liquor Dealers' Association disbanded after prohibition.

Carl Schultz, named as head of the league, was present during Frederick's testimony. Samuel Seabury, counsel of the committee, planned to call him and other officers of the league later.

When it became necessary to proceed against any place where a blue card was exhibited, Frederick said, policemen were told to make a charge of possession of liquor rather than of selling, against the speakeasy. Possession is a less serious offense.

The Seabury charges that 125 men on Staten Island not entitled to relief had obtained aid from city funds, which were branded false by Charles F. Kerrigan, assistant to Mayor Walker, were the subject of a hearing before Commissioner of Accounts Higgins.

Jacob Gould Schurman, Jr., who with three other Seabury attaches was called to testify, accused Higgins and Kerrigan of seeking to "whitewash" the accusations.

He charged that Tammany officials would not act on disclosures before the committee, and that such proceedings as Higgins instituted in the present matter were merely obstructionist tactics.

Bathroom Dispute Gets Him $10 Fine

John A. Ledbetter, 48, of Flint, of Norfolk Downs, was fined $10 in Quincy district court on a charge of assault and battery on his 15-year-old stepdaughter, Ruth N. Lawrence, as the result of family argument over the use of the bathroom. Ledbetter was also placed under $100 bonds to keep the peace.

Ledbetter according to testimony, had been in the bathroom about 20 minutes yesterday when Miss Lawrence asked her mother to request him to vacate. When he came out he is alleged to have struck the girl.

"El" Employes to Give Pay for Idle

Of the 7665 employes of the Boston Elevated Railway, 6795 have indicated a desire to contribute one per cent of their pay to a fund for the relief of Elevated employes who have been laid off temporarily, according to Edward Dana, general manager of the railway.

This fund will be administered by a committee consisting of Gen. Charles H. Cole, a member of the board of public trustees; Dana, John H. Moran, general auditor of the railway, and two employes.

The Republican tax program will defeat them in 1932 as sure as a pumphandle is iron.

All the Democrats have to do is to mark time and let the elephant strangle itself with its own trunk.

The Mellon tax menu means we are going to get the same old dishes with worse cooking at higher prices.

The Democrats are fighting the administration tax schedule instead of donating more eggs to make the omelet bigger.

That means the Democrats are either honest about it or they are going to put up a sham skirmish with wax bullets.

Then in 1932, they will be able to say, "Well, it was like the bewlegged man and the greased pig. It got through. But we did our best to stop it."

COMMISSION ON BLADES HIGH, SAYS ALDRED

Five per cent commission for the sale of blades was far much to pay salesmen and others, John K. Aldred of New York testified today in the Gillette Safety Razor Co. suit.

Aldred was chairman of the 1919 board of directors of the Gillette Co. The hearing is before Judge William M. Prest sitting as master in the $20,000,000 suit brought by minority stockholders against the 1920 directors.

Under the guidance of Louis S. Cornick, Aldred's counsel, the witness was led step by step over testimony he previously gave relative to payments for the sale of blades, rejuvenation of the latter after being used, and other matters connected with the affairs of the concern.

At one point in his testimony Aldred, who sat in the witness box immaculately attired, paused to refresh his memory by reading testimony he gave under the previous examination by Thomas D. Hall, representing the minority stockholders.

This testimony dealt with the telephone conversation he had with a Mr. Stockman. Aldred's attention was directed to a letter dated June 19, 1920, from Henry J. Fuller, which showed 3,000,000 packages of blades were shipped in 1920.

Aldred said when he read the net earnings for various years, including subsidiaries after reserves, and other charges against operation expenses were considered, the amounts varied.

He said he believed in this connection that power adjustments had been made to make the annual statements to stockholders a correct one.

Dr. Atkins to Head Haverhill Hospitals

Haverhill, Dec. 11—With but one dissenting vote, Robinson F. Atkins, administrative officer of the U. S. Veterans' Hospital in Rutland, was elected director of the three Haverhill municipal hospitals by the city council today.

One vote was cast for Miss Margaret West, recently deposed head of the Gale Hospital, who had asked for an injunction stopping her removal on the grounds she is a civil service appointee.

Mitchell, Store Man at Haverhill, Dies

A CLOWN THAT GIVES CHEER

Hundreds of childish voices raised in deep pleasure—in laughter. If you are shopping at Sears, Roebuck's, you'll soon discover that this cheerful hubbub emanates from no less a place than the store's theater in Toyland. For there, in the Boston store, Fred D. Gravel, known far and wide as "Trixo," the famous clown, thrills his youthful audience. Twice daily, at 2 and 3 p. m., Saturdays at 8 p. m. also, Trixo" goes through his funny antics before a capacity filled theater.

BOSSY CLASHES WITH OLD FOE

Newburyport, Dec. 11—"Bossy" Gillis, defeated mayor—but still a ban boy—weathered his last City Council meeting in silence last night and then broke out in a final harangue against his "enemies."

The largest audience in several years attended the meeting only to sit through 15 minutes of routine as "Bossy" quietly viewed the proceedings.

Then William Peebles, defeated city councillor, crossed his path.

Peebles' defeat and that of Moses Wright, Jr., were two shining rays of consolation to Bossy and eased the disappointment of his own political demise.

"Well, I guess I'm in your class now," Gillis chuckled as he met Peebles on the way out.

Peebles flared at the remark and the two argued at length to the delight of a crowd that quickly collected.

Another verbal set-to with Councillor Bernard Jacobs followed when the mayor boarded his waiting automobile he was cheered by many younger follow s.

Truck Misses Girl But Crashes Trolley

Methuen, Dec. 11—Swerving his heavily loaded oil truck on the icy pavement in order to avoid striking a school girl near Cook's corner today, John Pomerleau of Lawrence drove head-on into a Haverhill-bound street car carrying six passengers.

Although both truck and street car were demolished no one was seriously injured. Alex Champion, the motorman, helped Pomerleau from the wreckage.

DOMINIONS SET 'FREE' BY KING

London, Dec. 11 (AP)—King George today gave his assent to the Statute of Westminster bill which creates a status of equality between Great Britain and the dominions, giving the latter full power to enact legislation independent of the government in London.

The royal assent makes the measure a part of the law of the land. It was previously adopted by both Houses of Parliament.

The King also assented to the horticultural products bill, which establishes customs duties on imports of such produce as may compete in the domestic markets of Great Britain with home-grown commodities.

The Statute of Westminster applies fully to the Irish Free State but there are certain reservations with regard to India.

G. O. P. PICKS ON DEMOCRATIC 2-3DS RULE

By LOUIS SEIBOLD

Washington, Dec. 11—Hagging their war on partisan Republican members of the last session of Congress have picked out one vulnerable spot in the Democratic armor for attack.

The assailing forces propose to expose Democratic professions of faith by pointing out the incongruity of the undemocratic two-thirds rule in the naming of national tickets. The reactionary Republican party employs the Democratic process of majority rule in selecting its presidential candidates.

Agitation among Democratic leaders, as disclosed by the Hearst newspapers, has made a strong appeal to the Republicans questing for weapons of defense.

DEMOCRATS DUBIOUS.

Leading Democrats who frankly concede the justice of the charge that the undemocratic two-thirds rule is a direct contradiction of Democratic pretensions, are dubious of the strength of their line of defence.

The glaring inconsistency of the practice of substituting the undemocratic two-thirds rule for majority will which is employed to settle all other party disputes, is admitted by some of the outstanding leaders in the Democratic party.

LEADERS FAVOR CHANGE.

They believe the party should catch up with the modern spirit of the times. The first step, they assert, will result in the discarding of a method of selecting presidential candidates repugnant even to Republicans.

The list of those who hold this opinion is already an impressive one. It includes such well informed and experienced leaders as Col. E. M. House, former National Chairman Cordell Hull, Elizabeth Marbury, William Gibbs McAdoo, Sen. Robert F. Wagner and many others of equal prominence.

SHIP OFFICERS SENT ASHORE IN STARR PROBE

New York, Dec. 11—The secret removal of two handsome officers from their duties aboard a trans-Atlantic liner was revealed today as the latest development in the Starr Faithfull death investigation.

The officers were removed by the ship owners as a direct result of the statement of a sailor that he saw the beautiful Starr leap from the deck of the liner.

While Dist. Atty. Edwards of Nassau County refused to discuss the removal of the officers it was reported the owners of the liner had ordered the officers ashore at New York so they would be available for questioning.

Edwards and his assistant, Martin W. Littleton, maintained a non-committal attitude today, refusing to confirm that an official statement has been placed in their hands in which an eyewitness declares he saw Starr make the fatal suicide leap from the liner.

FOUR SLAYERS DIE IN CHAIR

Menard, Ill., Dec. 12 (AP)—Four convicted murderers, three of them Negroes, were put to death in the electric chair today.

The white man was Monty Pannitt, 57-year-old farm hand who murdered his benefactors, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Schulino, when they asked him to move from their house, which he had occupied rent free for several years.

Pannitt had been fed and clothed by the Schulinos, and when they asked him to vacate the house he shot them.

The Negroes executed were Hazel Johnson, 31, Decatur, Ill., convicted of slaying William Keller, a railroad special police officer, January 9, last; James Jackson, 31, convicted of slaying his wife in East St. Louis, last April 5, and Willie Gunn, 32, convicted of killing Max Stevens, a grocer, at East St. Louis, Ill., in a holdup last January.

He'll Officiate

Bobby Agnew, recruited from the ranks of moving picture stars in Hollywood and master of ceremonies at the Cocoanut Grove, will officiate Sunday night at Cocoanut Grove cabaret show, in aid of Boston Evening American's Christmas Basket Fund.

SURPRISES DUE AT BENEFIT CABARET

[illegible] Yes, this is Bobby Agnew speaking.

You wish to know about tomorrow night? Oh, yes, you're right. The Cocoanut Grove is to open on next Sunday night, and the Sunday following, as was announced in The Boston Evening American yesterday.

DOING THEIR BIT

What's that? It's the public?

Of course it's a great deal more for an institution than that. We are going to do our share to help boost the Evening American's Christmas Basket Fund. As you know, this year's demands on the fund are greater than ever before and unfortunately, the receipts from the annual benefit have been insufficient to meet the increased demands. So the management of the Cocoanut Grove and all the artists, musicians and staff are going up their sleeves and are to roll down here and stage the smartest cabaret and supper show that we have ever presented. The proceeds will go to that worthy Christmas Basket Fund.

What form will it take?

The first part of the program will begin about [illegible] o'clock. [illegible] will be open for those who come early. And oh lads, what a show we're going to put on!

MANY ATTRACTIONS

I'm all excited to find what you said.

Why, who don't I be. Listen to this. There will be the [illegible] Solomon orchestra—the classiest, and so will Lou Raquette—

You simply adore her dancing.

That's more than I can say so I'll tell Miss Raquette. Then there will be Reels & Wells, who [illegible] they're the newest addition to the Cocoanut Grove scene. It's worth giving up more than a Sunday evening just to see and hear them.

Well I be here.

Positively. I wouldn't miss it for the world. And what a lot of extra attractions I'll have to present on that night.

You want to know what the extra attractions will be?

Really I must not divulge that now. You know I have to hold some surprises back for sunday night. But I'll whisper this much of the secret. Some friends of mine here with shows at the local theaters — persons whose names are nationally known, oh, yes, much better known than I am and [illegible]

What?

SURPRISES TOO

"Mister, tell 'em comers

Dance—and [illegible] say.

Well the whole program will be repeated after midnight, and oh yes!—there's something I almost forgot. The license board has granted special permission on this occasion for us to remain open until 3 a. m. That's what they have done to aid the worthy cause.

Anyone coming?

"Good—I'll be looking for you Ruby Joe."

RULES OF THE GAME IMPORTANT IN MORE THAN BRIDGE

By ROBERT E. ROGERS

ACCORDING TO AN EARLY and possibly mistaken commentary on the Lenz-Culbertson bridge battle, to decide which of two methods of bidding in Contract is the more efficacious, we learn that so far neither seems to possess any marked advantage. An expert reviewing the rubbers of the two sessions of the contest which have been played at the time of writing, is of the opinion that if the Culbertsons had used the Lenz official method of bidding the difference in the final scores would not have been more than five points. Similarly Mr. Lenz could just as well have used the Culbertson method without seriously affecting his success to date.

ROBERT E. ROGERS

This is important if true. It may be that, as the rubbers roll up toward the stated 150, one or the other method will be proved markedly superior. In that case the purpose for which the challenge was issued will have been attained. But it is equally possible, in the light of the present comment, that the result will be practically a draw. The result will depend, not on the method, but on the fall of the cards and the skill exhibited in playing the hands.

Preliminary Agreement Necessary

We are told that any game, such as bridge or poker, played by the same group over a long period of time, tends on the whole to even up, that the individual's winnings and losses pretty much balance. So it may turn out in this case. That will only make confusion worse confounded. The problem of playing Contract has apparently become a serious one. Last summer I tired of a woman who had learned a local method somewhere up in Maine. She came down to Boston and found that she was out of it because everybody was playing Culbertson.

Old-fashioned Whist and old-fashioned Auction Bridge could be played by any sort of a pick-up, improvised set of partners. Not so with Contract. The signals are arbitrary, and if your partner does not understand them you are properly sunk.

And the moral of that is, as the Duchess said to Alice, that even in a game there must be at least a preliminary agreement about methods and procedure, if one is to get anywhere. Not for nothing are we accustomed to use the phrase "the rules of the the game" in every sort of contest. Football played with rugby rules on one side and association rules on the other would be an anarchy. In poker it must be clearly established whether or not the deuces are to be wild. And the ace must be either high card or low card, or there is trouble.

We have come in a situation in political and economic thinking which is an exact parallel to the Culbertson-Lenz dispute. In the 19th century things were relatively simple. Capitalistic individualism was the rule of the game. The Socialists were a noisy but, on the whole, an ineffectual minority—as the doctrinaire Socialists still are. The disagreements of the the political parties, Conservatives and Liberals, Republicans and Democrats, were on matters of policy within the rules.

Differences Over the Rules

Nowadays, however, there are evident many widespread splits or schisms as to the rules of the game. In England parties differ irrevocably over the dole and the tariff, points of view which involve the entire future of England. In Germany competent observers warn us that the New Year may see a tremendous upset, in which the social-democratic control will go down in what amounts to a revolution, and the Fascist dictatorship of the Hitler-Straz group may seize the power.

In the United States we stand only at the beginning of a long, bitterly fought and probably wasteful struggle between those who insist on sticking to the "traditional American" doctrine of individual and local self-help and those who are spokesman for some kind of modified socialism, in which the government will be called upon to provide funds, work and a living for all.

This struggle among us will not be fought entirely on party lines. Both major parties include both extreme conservatives and extreme radicals. It is likely that the independents, the Western progressives, the sons of the wild asses, may hold the balance of power. If they do, it is plain in which direction that power will be swung.

The only countries that seem to know no uncertainty are Russia and Italy. There are no anarchies of conflicting philosophies. In both countries the rules of the game have long been established. Only the official system is played. The Culbertsons have all been suppressed—jailed, banished, executed or otherwise silenced.

A good many of us find ourselves in the position of Thomas Carlyle, in the bad times of 1850, when he saw the democracy incapable of ruling itself, its chosen leaders made in the image of the democracy) absolutely up against it, incapable, incompetent, at odds, impotent. Liberty, he saw, had its good points, but when it came to government and the great problems it might be more of a curse than a blessing.

Find the Right Path

"Liberty? The true liberty of a man consists in his finding out, or being forced to find out, the right path and to walk therein. To learn or to be taught what work he is actually able for; and then by permission, persuasion, or even compulsion, to set about doing the same. . . . If thou do know better than I what is right, I conjure thee, in the name of God, to force me to do it: were it never by such brass collars, whips and handcuffs, leave me not to walk over precipices." (Past and Present, Book III, Chapter XIII.)

Carlyle looked to the Mussolinis and the Stalins of this world in a time of chaos and uncertainty. They seem to be doing pretty well. But that never can be our method. Our method must be the reconciliation of warring forces in a single plan. In England, MacDonald and Baldwin. In Germany, Hitler and Brüning, which is not unlikely. In America, Hoover and La Follette. The sinking of petty differences, one plan, radical or not, agreed upon by all; a united front.

We have all got to agree on some rules for the game!

"The country is in a bad situation," he said. "There is no doubt but prohibition can be repealed, but it must take time. We can not respect a law which was unconstitutionally thrown upon us.

"The liquor situation belongs to the state. It is a local matter. It has nothing to do with national regulation. And we must not let any minority group rule the country.

Onion Soup Given Big Welcome

By MARTHA LEE

From Martha Lee's Friday Morning Broadcast Over Station WAAB

WHEN THE [illegible] Onion Soup au Gratin being a be much [illegible] as a must seem to have a use for this variety of good [illegible] soup.

We made some this week, in the morning school and it got a great welcome. First we made some good strong beef broth using four cups of water to a pound [illegible] and put the [illegible] and cooked [illegible] hour. Then we added one [illegible] onions, sliced, and let it all cook [illegible] time. Then we strained and [illegible]

[illegible] Lewis were [illegible] in the same [illegible] house. But it was [illegible] fault.

I was a snappy girl in those [illegible] days. Dances and theaters and parties. [illegible] coming into the house [illegible] times, snatch a mouthful or two, change my dress [illegible] again. Every [illegible] I ran crash headlong into my [illegible] husband. But I didn't [illegible] mind. Wad each [illegible] an apology and keep [illegible]

But our mothers plotted the romance. It happened they liked each other—they were eternally borrowing pepper and sugar and eggs from each other—so they figured their children would match ideally. Well, maybe they weren't so very wrong.

It's about seven years since I've been married and it seems to me that the boys were at their [illegible] then. If they took a girl around the corner for an ice cream soda they thought they were entitled to a kiss. And if they took you to a show and brought you back in a taxi—you were lucky you had no fractured bones.

"And so when Lewis took me to the theater, escorted me into a nice, cozy restaurant, drove me home—and took my hand only when he shook it good-by—I realized that here was a regular fellow, with principles and a sense of decency and, well—a man after my own inclinations.

FELL IN LOVE

"To be candid I had fallen in love with him—with all the palpitating, trembling, flushing heart throbs. And when a girl falls in love she hates to remain on the pedestal of a Greek goddess. She becomes human with all the weakness that flesh inherits. She begins to long for a loving word a meaning look, a strong embrace a lingering kiss. My heart grew full of yearning.

"I think my worries started [illegible] remained the gentleman—kind and respectful and impersonal. He was not aloof—yet never intimate. I began to think perhaps I was right in calling him a perambulating robot. A chaperon could not have acted more properly.

"Perhaps, I should have been more forward and kittenish—put my arm around him or kissed him in a moment of elation. But I was too mortified to do it. He seemed to sense that I was afraid to disillusion him. It was a real dilemma. And though his manners spoke volumes his actions [illegible] formal

AT WITS END

"In the meantime I had dropped my other escorts—and my future began to look drab and colorless and futile. I racked my brains for some new folly.

"I was at my wits end when passing one evening through the neighborhood I saw some gypsies operating in a vacant store. An idea struck me and I almost leaped with joy. For a few dollars in advance and the promise of some more I 'fixed' the deal.

"Several nights later when the girls were visiting me and Lewis was there [illegible] the gypsies knocked at the door. They appeared they were traveling from house to house and were reading fortune cheaply. I admitted them while Lewis scoffed.

"But soon his jeering ended. They began to peel off facts of his past life that astounded him.

"'Cripes,' he cried, 'there may be something to their boasting.'

"So they took us individually into another room ostensibly to tell us our fortunes. Lewis was the last to go, but returned with the reddest face.

"Two nights later I was bending over the telephone. Lewis came crashing into the foyer.

"'Is this Bert you're speaking to?' he cried.

A REAL THRILL

"'Yes,' I replied although it was merely one of the girls.

"In another instant Lewis had seized me impetuously and was kissing me almost with violence. I was so genuinely thrilled and flustered that I could not even act up to it. My heart was racing like the Twentieth Century.

"When I finally recovered consciousness, I inquired with all the innocence I could muster:

"'What made you kiss me so suddenly?'

"'The gypsies told me Bert planned to date you up and propose to you and that he had a good chance unless I beat him to it with proof of my love,' he replied.

"'Well, I'm glad you did,' I answered with another kiss."

Daily True Story

The First Kiss

THE WOMEN had grown tired of bridge and sat gossiping over tea and marmalade. Inevitably they drifted to the subject of romance. They were discussing the boldness of the present generation—the promiscuous petting and kissing [illegible] were varied on the [illegible] for days were all com[illegible] kissing—having married during the so-called flapper era.

My husband was so jealous, I nearly lost him on account of kissing my cousin," remarked one of them. The group tittered, and loudest of all—Mrs. Libby Branston.

"Girls, you can't imagine to what I had to stoop to get that first kiss from my husband," she continued to laugh. "He certainly is a rarity for this age." The other women drew their chairs closer.

Lewis and I met because our [illegible] were living in the same [illegible] house. But it was [illegible] fault.

BRIEF STROLLS AROUND SPORT MAP

Football's dying Eastern kick tomorrow the big charity battle between the Army and Navy in Yankee Stadium, New York . . . The Army and Navy, even the words carry a thrill! . . . Not as rich in traditions as Yale and Harvard, but the most colorful of all football spectacles . . . The Army and Navy reminds us of the comment of Toastmaster Willie Collier after a long winded speech by a grizzled old general, followed by another Marathonic outburst by a famous admiral . . . "Now we all know," commented Collier, before introducing the next speaker, "why they say 'The Army and Navy forever!'" . . . The Army and Navy, Warner-Stanford football vs. Notre Dame football . . . The Army beat Notre Dame and Notre Dame beat the Navy, but Navy slowly but surely has been gathering momentum . . . It is "peaking" for the Army . . . Anything can happen in an Army-Navy game just like it does when Yale meets Harvard . . . Anything can happen in football

Coaches are all wet in insisting the abolishing of wedge plays through allowing use of a "toe" on the kickoffs will take most of the danger out of football . . . Consider the two Fordham players the late Leonard Murphy and Johnny Szymanski, who at this writing is fighting for his life and may have joined Murphy in football's Valhalla by the time this appears in print . . . Neither of the two were hurt in wedge plays . . . Both received their injuries on punt plays . . . Szymanski was hurt in attempting to take out a Bucknell tackler and Murphy received the injury that resulted in his death in the same way . . . Sometimes you cannot be certain as just when and how a player is injured . . . A player often will go through several plays after the one in which he really was hurt . . . When Cadet Byrne was killed in the Harvard game many years ago it was noticed he staggered back to position after the previous play . . . If coach or doctor had taken him out then and there his life probably would have been saved . . . Some of those who, this season, were inclined to criticise Dr. Tommy Richards of Harvard for pulling Harvard players out of the game didn't know their football onions . . . Dr. Richards did . . . No victory is worth a badly injured player, let alone the taking of a young life . . . Johnny Szymanski may have been the victim of a series of injuries . . . He was hurt in both the West Lebertey-Fordham and New York University-Fordham clashes that preceded the fatal game with Bucknell.

When Luther McCarthy was killed by Arthur Pelky in a ring bout in Calgary doctors said the blow ordinarily would not have caused death . . . McCarthy previously had received a spinal injury when thrown by a horse . . . All strenuous sports demand careful medical supervision . . . A group of young doctors who pass boys for ring bouts must hurt . . . They are even more answerable than the promoter or manager, who urges them to pass a youngster over which there is any doubt of being in perfect physical condition . . . Ninety-nine per cent of the managers can sit idly by and see their boxers butchered . . . The only way those managers can be hurt is in the pocketbook . . . The safety guard of boxing is a strong enough Boxing Commission to make promoters, managers, doctors and officials really toe the line . . . There is no Boston boxer in particular who is going around "on his heels." Continued fighting may mean death—or worse . . . Look out after the preliminary boys, Mister Official . . . The stars can take care of themselves . . . A headliner often calls off a bout for a swollen knuckle or a fancied injury . . . The poor preliminary kid goes through with a bout when he should be home in bed . . . All most of the amateurs get is doctors' bills . . . Sport has a sordid, seamy side as well as a glorious and glamorous one . . . We've seen five men killed in the ring . . . Not a single death would have resulted if proper precautions were taken.

Reckon we'll have to trek to the Boston Garden tonight to get a peak at the young heavyweight they are all raving about, Al Grayson, the Harvard art student . . . Al, we're told, can box, hit, do anything and everything . . . Other managers say Jim Toland has a million-dollar prospect . . . Stands 6 feet 1¾ inches, taps the beam at 186 and owns up to 23 years . . . Born in Newfoundland, raised in Framingham, schooled in Detroit, where he went to Detroit University . . . Played end on Detroit's crack amateur eleven, Rayle's A. C. . . . Has won 13 of 15 fights . . . His two defeats were on close decisions in short bouts . . . Paying for Harvard art course by posing and modeling at Fogg Art Museum . . . Is an actor, too . . . Toured the stocks last summer with The Barnstormers with Grover Francis Cleveland, son of the late Grover Cleveland, President of the United States . . . "Hurt?" queried Toland when Grayson came back to the corner after his bout with Bishop Hart, the Philadelphia brunette . . . "See this scar?" queried Grayson in return, pointing to an old wound under his chin . . . "A mule gave me that . . . If the mule didn't stagger me you don't think the colored man can, do you?"

The N. Y. U. News has caught it from the Columbia Spectator . . . Chick Meehan's own college paper figuratively accuses him of everything from murder to mayhem . . . Says he stands for "big time football with all its attendant evils, recruiting of players, lavish entertainment of prospects, subsidization of athletes, athletic scholarship funds, physical punishment for delinquents and general drafting of students into universities for the sole purpose of playing football" . . . More than a month ago we told you Meehan was going away from N. Y. U. . . . Now will you believe it? . . . What made the editorial writer so silent when N. Y. U. was winning? . . . Back to the Columbia Spectator . . . The Daily Dartmouth calls Reed Harris, editor of the Spectator, a "headline drunk editor" . . . O-o-oh, what a cruel slap on the wrist!

Big leagues have reduced the player limit from 25 to 23, but we haven't heard a peep about reducing the price of admission . . . Viscount Takatana Sohma, a Japanese bluebood, gave Rabbit Maranville of the baseball tourists a birthday party celebration on the Rabbit's 40th birthday . . . Among Rabbit's presents were a pair of ivory pigeons, a large Japanese doll, a birthday cake with a large chocolate rabbit atop and an especially made Selder's glove, measuring 18 inches from finger to finger . . . Four months more and the Rabbit will be back on the coaching line at Braves Field

BROUILLARD IS VICTOR ON FOUL

Cleveland, Dec. 11—Boston ringmen played a large part in a Christmas benefit fund show here, with Ernie Schaaf belting Eddie Simms out of the picture. Lou Brouillard winning from Paul Pirrone on a foul, and Jack Sharkey refereeing a feature bout.

Schaaf clearly demonstrated his superiority over Simms, a Cleveland boy. Ernie flailed the home towner around the ring for three rounds, and Simms' seconds flung the towel into the ring at the gong for the fourth frame.

Pirrone Repeatedly Fouls Brouillard

The bout between Lou Brouillard of Worcester, veteran pit champion, and Paul Pirrone, Cleveland, went to the titleholder on a foul in the seventh frame. Pirrone sent at least six blows into foul territory.

Pirrone shot a right to the groin in the sixth session and the champion sank to the canvas.

After a conference between the referee and judges Brouillard was given a five-minute rest period.

In the seventh stanza Pirrone countered with a blow below the belt.

Pirrone continued to belt the champion in the stomach, and finally the referee hailed the foul, giving the decision to Brouillard on a foul.

Santiago Zorilla, dusky-skinned lightweight of San Francisco, lost a decision to Johnny Farr, when the judges voted for the Clevelander. Referee Jack Sharkey cast a vote for Zorilla.

Unbeaten Tulane's unanimous All-American end, JERRY DALYRMPLE, smiles at you from the hospital cot in New Orleans where he is convalescing from a kidney injury received in the game with Washington State. He hopes to guard Tulane's flank in the big New Year's game with Southern California.

YALE FEARS FOR AMATEUR SPORT

New Haven, Ct., Dec. 11 (INS)—As an emergency measure to provide relief funds, Saturday's round robin football tournament which Yale won was justified but as precedent for future football customs it was too much like a "medieval tournament or gladiatorial exhibition," the Yale News, campus daily, said in an editorial today.

The News attacked particularly the system of having tie games decided on points by a board of judges.

"Can you imagine Yale and Harvard playing to a 0 to 0 draw and three little fat men in white ducks podtulating who had really won?" the paper asked adding the fear that amateur athletics would soon lose all elements of sportsmanship.

Maine Announces New Managers

Orono, Me., Dec. 11 (AP)—Thomas H. Hersey of Bangor, and Frederick Black, of Searsport, have been elected managers of the University of Maine football and cross country teams, respectively, for next year, it was announced.

Assistant managers named were: Football, Paul McDonnell, of Groveton, N. H., and Walter A. White, of Sacco; cross country, Woodrow Palmer, of Berlin, N. H., and Elmer Randall, of Westbrook.

Police Spares—O'Toole, Harnois, Murray, Callinan, Prescott.

The Boston police department basketball team, due to its veterans, is a slight favorite to defeat the Boston University Law School five composed of former college stars, when the two meet on the B. U. court tonight. The entire proceeds of the game will be turned over to the Boston Evening American Christmas Basket Fund.

In addition to the game, there will be many added attractions to make the evening a complete success for the large crowd that is expected. "Tip" O'Neil, the Boston American police reporter and radio personality will entertain between the halves.

After the game there will be dancing and the music will be furnished by Herb Silver. The cost of the tickets is only 50 cents, due to the fact that everybody taking part has contributed his services.

The game itself promises to be a thriller. The law school has won four out of its five games this year and the police record is the same.

There have been a few last minute changes in the Boston University lineup as the future barristers want to win this game.

The Daily Dozen

By MYLES T. McSWEENEY

In answer to numerous inquiries [illegible] to be exact, we print today a few points on bridge so that readers may understand what, besides money and holes of publicity, Lenz and Culbertson, with their partners, are fighting for.

A rubber is something you wear on a rainy day. One hundred and fifty rubbers is enough to prove which is the best system, and also, to cover 75 pairs of shoes.

A "grand slam" is something you give your partner for trying your ace. This is the cause of many divorce suits.

A "little slam" is either a kick in the shins, meaning not to ask for another drink, or a black eye, given one partner by another.

A "singleton" or exactly 2000 pounds.

East, West, North and South are polite names for what one partner calls another.

A "dummy" is your partner.

"No trumps" means that you have so many cards that you can't make up your mind.

A "conference retreat" means that you failed to win, but are smart enough to make readers believe you could have done worse.

At one-quarter of a cent per point, you can lose one million dollars by losing 400,000,000 points.

If you lose one million dollars, you either have one million dollars or you are crazy.

You can always tell a bridge player, but you can't tell him much.

[illegible] version as [illegible] Boston Bar Association, many reputable lawyers no longer seek bankruptcy business, and conscientious business men [illegible] their own counsel instead of employing bankruptcy experts, which they are [illegible]

FEES CHECKED

Although the court [illegible] the referee passed on [illegible] fees, [illegible] times cuts them considerably. It [illegible] to control the practice of [illegible] charges and collusion [illegible] which makes monopolization possible.

Even if no fee splitting is practiced, the legal mare exists of bankruptcy frequently eat up nearly one of the largest assets being the assets of administration of estates.

In one large case for example which was dismissed at a short time [illegible]

Further details of the activities of the Boston bankruptcy ring will be given by the Boston Evening American tomorrow.

Webster will receive bids until December 15 for $50,000 loan due Nov. 15, 1932.

NEW ENGLAND OUTLOOK SEEN AS GOOD

By FRANK H. MELOON
United Business Service of Boston tells us that the most favorable [illegible] this time are the New England and midwest industrial sections. [illegible] ly indicates that seasonal increases in industrial activity in both these sections will exceed [illegible] the increase and a step-up in [illegible] sales.

The Boston service declares:

Those who fear that Congress will bankrupt the country by excessive appropriations, says the United Business Service, will find their apprehensions greatly eased if Congress meets in a thrifty frame of mind. But the Federal government cannot play Santa Claus. Many members of Congress will exhaust themselves in debate, but no radical legislation is expected to be passed.

President H. J. Haas, of the concern in Yankees Assn. tells us: "Sporting people are interested [illegible] materially and [illegible] to [illegible] to cope with [illegible] problems than [illegible] have been in the past, so we look to the future confident that [illegible] substantial social and economic [illegible] loss will be adjusted satisfactorily."

"Confidence is not [illegible] established by any one thing but by an accumulation of things. If we can get confidence started on its way, gathering a little here and there, it will accelerate its speed as it goes along. This is not the work of any one man to perform but is the cumulative effort of each and every one of us."

While the Chadbourne Plan has not resulted in [illegible] the price of [illegible] yet [illegible] has been a failure, Francis J. Powell, chairman of the International Sugar Council, stated that although the Chadbourne Plan had not yet had a fair trial those who have [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] its enactment has retarded the [illegible] ing the Cuban sugar situation. He said some adjustment would have to be made to take care of Cuba's surplus and prevent its export to the United States, and this would be addressed in next year's Cuban crop. Most of the sugar will route to Europe to resume his duties with the council.

Today Cuban raw sugar for the initial month of the new year sold at a price a point higher than [illegible] the lowest price since trading began [illegible] Exchange and the lowest price, according to available records, back [illegible] Yet in September, [illegible] cents a pound.

STATE ST. Hears:

That most observers think the next few days will feature rather erratic price movements. For this reason it will probably be best for the average trader to assume a place in the side lines. While sharp bulges may provide scalping opportunities for the fast trader, short profits will be accepted

The New Low

Not only because it is a pea for hard headed thinking at a time when the sellers are likely in less mere panicky mood, but also [illegible] statistics ideas expressed here on Wednesday, the following is extracted from Rear Cdre. Thing's daily market letter.

"It might be well to remember that in 1921 the market made its primary low in June and, two months later, had worked itself into new low ground. There was much to-do about the violation of the June lows, but it is doubtful today about the violation of the October lows, but within a week not only had the decline been checked, but the market had turned about and started an upswing, which lasted for several years. In times like these current events assume a very much greater importance than will planned, cold-blooded reasoning, but in the end the cold-blooded reasoning proves to have been a more profitable procedure."

U. S. Steel

One of the strongest arguments used by bulls on the [illegible] stocks are still high in relation to 1921 prices. This is not an absolute truth and a little research will [illegible] at lower prices than prevailed at 1921 minimums. Allowing for the 40 per cent U. S. Steel stock dividend the low price yesterday was the equivalent of $69 in 1921 at which the actual low was $70.25. All this in the face of a greatly increased [illegible] values and a decrease in fixed obligations [illegible] an earnings priority of $438,000,000.

If the railroads do not obtain a voluntary reduction of wages and [illegible] they will go to the federal commission. In such an event it is thought the actual reductions will be greater than if [illegible] made at this January meeting.

Boardroom Briefs

The big disappointment for shorts has been the strength of Central after the deferred dividend announcement. . . . One Boston broker thinks that about 90 per cent of the bad news is already out [illegible] . . . Those days in the former blue chips are again [illegible] minded by observers that following [illegible] Gen. Foods [illegible] . . . Action in rayon is proving to be disastrous as following them to ridiculous highs . . . The reported increase in Russian harvests may prove just the tonic the grains need . . . The usual winter drop in consumption plus lower gasoline prices accounts for selling of oils.

Although the public has lost its taste for citizens' [illegible] the management of bullishness of Secretary Mellon received more than passing notice.

STOCKS HEAVY IN WALL ST. DEALINGS

New York, Dec. 11.—Stocks turned heavy in the late Wall St. trading today as the gains in the rails had strengthened the market early in the afternoon.

Carrier stocks more than surrendered net gains of a point or so when selling was resumed.

2,300,000-SHARE DAY

U. S. Steel, Loew's, General Foods, Bethlehem Steel and Air Reduction led a couple of points and more moderate reactions prevailed in a number of other favorite issues, including American Can, Woolworth and American Telephone. Transactions approximated 2,200,000 shares.

The list slumped heavily in the morning, registering many more record lows for the past week period, but perked up quickly when strong buying came into the parallel issues after midday, in connection with further bullish rumors over the railway wage discussions in Chicago.

SHORT COVERING SEEN

Brokers attributed the demand for the rail shares to short covering and real buying, reflecting a growing confidence that effective relief for the carriers from the ruinous railroad system is bound to come in some form or other, and that labor is presumably as anxious to keep the railways solvent as anyone.

The week-end mercantile reviews reported brisker holiday buying of merchandise, bringing numerous readers to wholesaling and jobbing lines, however, remain quiet, in keeping with the expected trend of December. The days' reports on automotive centers indicated furbishings in preparation for next year's sales, although production remains slow.

Wall St. did not seem concerned over rumors that Japan might abandon the gold standard, in connection with the fall of the cabinet.

Bankers who have connections in Japan expressed confidence in the ability of that country to pull out of economic difficulties, but pointed out that the Chinese boycott on Japanese goods had had a disturbing effect. The Japanese yen dropped to a new low for the year.

November sales, increased in sales, were 418,762 this year, compared with 400,203 for November, 1930, a gain in quantity of merchandise sold of 18,559 tons, or 4.64 per cent.

London, Dec. 11.—Prices were generally higher on the exchanges here and in Paris today. The local market had a cheerful tone and British funds advanced one to two points on Chancellor Chamberlain's budget speech in the House of Commons. Rubber shares were strong on hopes of a revised tariff plan.

Rail Liens Resist Bond Mart Selling

New York, Dec. 11 (AP)—Although the bond market today was spotted with some more new low records, several of the recently badly battered issues developed resisting tendencies and United States government issues were bought at slightly advancing prices.

"Stanley Magic Door," shown at the National Hotel Exposition, automatically opens when anyone approaches.

But what most of us need is a door that will automatically lock when anyone approaches.

Or a magic telephone which automatically fails to ring when anyone calls up.

And a neat device for the thoughtful hostess would be a gin bottle which automatically refuses to pour after the third drink.

NEW MARKET IN ALLSTON

Residents of the Allston section of Greater Boston will welcome tomorrow a new Mohican Market which will open its doors to the public at 9 a. m.

Since February, 1916, when the Mohican Company opened its first large market in Boston on Washington st., it has kept pace with the progress of Boston. The increasing patronage accorded Mohican markets has prompted the company to open its fourth large market at 137-139 Harvard ave., Allston.

The new market will be modern throughout. Many plate glass show cases have been installed to insure the sanitary handling of fresh foods. Modern refrigerated cases in the meat and dairy departments, with automatic refrigeration for meat coolers, will assure customers fresh and wholesome foods.

The layout of the new store has been planned to utilize every inch of space to make the merchandise more accessible and convenient to the customer.

The opening tomorrow is another example of the confidence that the Mohican Market Co. has in New England and in an owners of the restoration of normal conditions in the country.

The manager to be employed in the market will be as far as possible made up of residents of Allston and vicinity.

The same values in quality foods will be offered. This market will mean additional demand for goods which will be purchased through local sources, helping Boston in many ways.

E. L. Spaulding, local manager of the new market, said that, in fact, all who are interested, the many features installed in it.

STRAW VOTE ON PRESIDENCY

Calvin Coolidge will be a candidate for president next year if the people seek his leadership now.

Herbert Hoover will not hesitate to step aside if the public indicates its preference for Coolidge.

Those, at least, are the intimations set forth in a window display invitation by Brown's Letters, Inc., 169 Devonshire st., for the passer-by to step inside and cast his ballot in a pre-nomination straw vote limited to five candidates, Coolidge, Hoover, Newton D. Baker, Albert C. Ritchie and Franklin D. Roosevelt.

The firm is also circulating ballots among architects and the building trades in New England and New York.

Water Finds Its Level

And Human Beings Find Their Level

ONCE A DRAMATIC COSSACK, NOW A HUMBLE PASTRY COOK

Above you see two pictures of the same man and perhaps mutter sympathetically, "He hath put down the mighty," and add "poor fellow."

The picture on the left at the top shows Sachno-Ustimowitsch, in the days when he and the Czar were in their glory.

He wear the magnificent uniform, aggressive mustache and fierce expression of Adjutant to the Ataman (Commander) of the crack Tersky Cossack Regiment.

The Czar fell, Bolshevism arose, castles were torn down, and now Sachno-Ustimowitsch is at work as pastry cook in a small Berlin restaurant.

The sentimental say, "How sad, how sorrowful." But the practical say "water finds its level, so do men. For the first time in his life Sachno-Ustimowitsch is useful."

The lower picture also illustrates a fall in grandeur. The young woman is the Princess Hiang-Thi-The, of the House of Hoang-Ba. Her grandfather was King of Tonkin, before the French occupied that country, and made their own ruling arrangements. She has no royal grandfather now, no longer power to lift a finger and send a man to his death for an offense, however slight.

But the intelligent, energetic young woman does not repine or ask for sympathy, and doesn't get a job as pastry cook. She gets work in the movies, proves that she knows how to express emotion, and will probably have more genuine fun as a movie actress than she could ever have had as a Princess of the House of Hoang-Ba. Adversity brings us to our level and does us good, if there is good in us.

A Real Bank Solution

Former Governor Fuller's offer to loan a quarter of a million dollars to liquidate the closed Medford Trust Company is certain to have at least one salutary effect.

It will focus the attention of the public upon the suffering occasioned the innocent depositors, and it should stir the State officials and our bankers to some real efforts to pay them back as much of their money as possible before Christmas.

As we read Mr. Fuller's offer it means that he will loan $250,000 without interest and for any indefinite period necessary:—

1—Provided four or five other men of wealth will supply a similar amount under similar conditions.

2—Provided the closed bank can be rehabilitated so "that no depositor would lose a single penny of his savings."

No doubt these conditions will not be met.

There are three ways in which the innocent depositors can be aided.

1—If some other bank will take over the Medford Trust Company and absorb the losses in return for the increased business certain to flow to it.

2—If Mr. Fuller by himself or in company with some of the other men of wealth he seeks, instead of advancing a loan, would employ their money to take over some of the frozen securities at their book value.

3—If the State officials now in charge of the bank will hasten liquidation without interminable delay and red tape and pay the depositors as much as possibly can be paid PROMPTLY.

Already the First National Bank of Medford has volunteered to loan up to thirty percent of the amounts due the Christmas Fund and Tax Club depositors.

Everybody knows that the banks of Massachusetts as elsewhere are cluttered with idle money. And the State should encourage these other banks to come to the rescue as the First National Bank of Medford has already done.

Everything said here with reference to the Medford Trust Company applies to the depositors of the Revere Trust Company and of the one or two smaller banks which have been taken over by the State.

The statesmanship of public officials and the financial genius of the bankers, about which we heard so much before the depression, are on trial.

Pity—Dangerous Virtue!

I BELIEVE that pity is the most beautiful—and the most dangerous—virtue on earth.

Used wisely, with control, it can lift life up to the stars. Used unwisely, intemperately, it can drag life down to the mud. And it is my private conviction that—taking things by and large—pity has done infinitely more dragging than lifting.

Pity's dangerous, first, because it is such a Nice Word. It listens lovely. The minute you say you pity someone, you step right into the front row with the saints. No one dare assail your motives. As a Pity-er, you have the bulge on all the critics. For, behold, have you not put aside your brute selfishness to extend the divine gift of compassion? Are you not, therefore, noble?

Well, maybe. But the chances are just as strong that you are NOT.

Pity MAY be a shining, selfless thing. But it also may be an alibi for 57 varieties of meddling and conceit.

Why does pity so often end in a vicious impasse? Is this why? We're sorry for the other fellow. Honestly sorry. Yet at the same time—though we don't acknowledge this to ourselves—we are getting a big bang out of being sorry. How else it makes us feel to contemplate his foolishness . . . how strong it makes us seem to minister to his weakness. And what a thrill it is to take up his messed life and put it in order! All our lives we've wanted to advise and boss and arrange people. Usually the foolish things have resisted and resented our services. But here's a chap who is in trouble. He can't resist us. He must do as we say—goody, goody!

Yet even while we're pitying him and doing lovely things for him, he seems to be carrying a secret grudge against us. And those we pity are so rarely grateful. I wonder why!

Pity is apt to make a bully of us—that's one aspect of this dangerous virtue. There's another, quite as bad. Pity is apt to make a tramp of the other fellow.

And pity is a bludgeon in the hands of the selfish and unscrupulous.

How many a man has whimpered a woman into marriage through pity . . . how many a woman has bound an unwilling man by the same means!

How many a parent gets by with murder on the same score!

"You must never, never hurt anybody. You haven't a right to a happiness if it hurts anybody."

We are taught that as children. It seems a gallant creed. But how many fine, intelligent, sensitive, valuable lives have been sacrificed to that creed . . . and how many coarse, stupid, selfish, sluggish natures have battened on it.

As a matter of fact, no progress is possible without "hurting someone."

Pity—an instrument for gods. Or fools. Or devils. Use it. But beware of it.

Just Folks

Contrast

People whispered as he went:
"Poor man, doesn't own a cent.
"Poor man, working day by day
Has no time for rest and play.
"Poor man! What a sorry fate
To be so unfortunate."

But the poor man passed along
Gayly whistling bits of song,
Stopped a moment to admire
Rosebeds in their best attire,
Chuckled as on flying feet
Came his children down the street,
Scampered with them, just as though
Not a care was his to know.
Poor of purse, but finding bliss
Some of us appear to miss.
Pointing many a blessing out,
Proud folks seldom think about.

New York Day by Day

Thoughts While Strolling

NEW YORK, Dec. 11—Thoughts while strolling: No one can shrug like Willie Howard. All my life I've wanted one of those short box pearl buttoned coats like Billy (Single) Clifford wore. Peggy Joyce is still an eyeful. They say Gloria's Michael Farmer hasn't all those reputed millions.

Fred Stone, a Longmont, Col., boy, who made good in the city. None of the imitators give "Shine O' Harvest Moon" the Nora Bayes touch. Impression of Jesse Lasky in one word—silky. Dean Cornwell suggests a pinchlaced English tutor. Overheard: "What I want is a slick-haired Lima gigolo named Carlos."

There's wholesome companionship at times among married performers who have trouped for years. Joseph Santley and Ivy Sawyer, for instance. Also Eva Puck and Sam White and Yorke & King. Few orchestra leaders are so effacing as Lou Forman at the Palace. He began at Minsky's.

E. E. Cummings' poetry makes me think of: "How much wood would a woodchuck chuck if a woodchuck could chuck wood." Every other fellow you meet is getting over a nervous prostration. I still believe a high class minstrel show could have a Broadway run.

Cry near the Winter Garden: "Gee! a horse!" Julius Tannen looks no older than he did 20 years ago when he was my favorite vaudevillian. What became of Vincent Serrano? Fay Wray and Swanson look alike. Fannie Brice resembled one of Bernar' Baruch's daughters. And Bing Crosby is a double for Phil Baker.

A crowd at an orange juice stand spiking drinks from a silver flask. Sign in a cafe window: "No glamor but swell eats." Louise Groody is a grand dancer, but she's always trying to sing. And Eddie Cantor should stick to blackface. Leering groups around dance hall entrances.

Lillian Lorraine in circulation again—with a club at the Beaux Arts. Six years ago she was doomed to a wheel chair—like Nellie Revell, who is skipping about, too. They come back on Broadway. But come back to what? I could work up an 18-karat drool over hot biscuits for dinner tonight.

Biblical prophecy of the thing feared coming upon one had two concrete Broadway victims recently. Sophie Tucker, fresh from British triumphs, found herself on opening night at a picture palace with a whispering voice. Laryngitis. Everett Marshall, after years of disappointing engagements, stirred an audience to its feet and high huzzahs in the "Scandals." A week later he was out of the cast with throat trouble.

* * *

The proprietor of one of the speakeasies in the theatrical zone has become an unfailing barometer of the Rialto. He knows instantly if a show is a hit. If after the first act, patrons rush in, pound the bar and cry, "A drink, quick!"—a run is assured. If they stroll in leisurely and linger, the flop is forecast. Incidentally, after Peter Arno's show, he reports he found an attendee under the table two weeks later. And still moaning.

* * *

At a dinner the other evening immortality popped up. Two doctors horned in. One, a heart specialist, said: "I do not believe in any immortality save that of the human race. It only goes on." The other, a famous surgeon, said: "My conviction of life after death grows firmer with surgical experience. As an interne I was an infidel. As a young surgeon I became an agnostic. Today, past 60, I believe with Charles Frohman that life's greatest adventure is that bugaboo humanity has erroneously labeled death." . . .

On West 56th street, over a garage, is a dance center where future Pavlowas and Nijinskis struggle for recognition. Garbed in cheese-cloth costumes they practice stage leaping dances and otherwise uphold the terpsichorean art. Some live on as little as $10 a month and a number actually show the effects of what comes perilously near being hunger.

No performer, to my notion, is so scornful of applause or so sincere in his efforts to please as the thin templed, bushy-haired James Barton. And no real drunk can seem so realistic as his portrayal of a stage bum. A great artist, my masters, knocking around rather obscurely in variety.

From Stuttgart, Ark.: "We have a buckoo in this town who has never been outside the city limits, but who says you are his closest friend. What kind of nutty complex is that?"

It's certainly no delusion of grandeur.

WHAT DO YOU KNOW?

Give the next line:

1. "The old order changeth yielding place to new"
2. "Magic casements opening on the foam"
3. "Ill fares the land to hastening ills a prey"
4. "Grow old along with me"
5. "Trailing clouds of glory do we come"

Answers to today's test:

Points of the President's Message—Number ONE

"If we lift our vision beyond the immediate emergencies we find fundamental national gains even amid depression. . . . There has been constant gain in knowledge and education."
—From the President's message to Congress.

It is difficult to understand how Mr. Hoover came to the conclusion that this depression is aiding education.

As a matter of fact, few public causes have been as hard hit by this particular economic disturbance as education.

Furthermore, in PREVIOUS national emergencies we ENLARGED the public educational opportunity that we are so UNWISELY RESTRICTING during this depression.

Professor Edgar W. Knight, of the School of Education of the University of North Carolina, paints a dark picture of what this depression is doing to discourage and retard education.

Writing in a recent issue of the Outlook and Independent, this authority says:

"In the last regular sessions of forty-four State Legislatures it was evident that not only would advanced school legislation be impossible to enact, but that the schools would find it difficult to retain the financial support they had gained in recent years.

"The Legislatures seem to close their eyes and swing the axe and ONE OF THE FIRST PLACES IT HIT HEAVILY WAS EDUCATION.

"Appropriations to schools, colleges and universities were greatly REDUCED, salaries of teachers were CUT from five to twenty-five per cent, the teaching load of the teachers and the size of classes were increased, school terms were SHORTENED, building programs were held up or ABANDONED ALTOGETHER, the annual increments in the salaries of teachers were denied, and many teachers returned to their work in September without contracts, not knowing the amount of salary they would receive or the length of the school term.

"Some Legislatures even failed to provide revenue for the appropriations which they made for education, and at least one declined to do so 'with full knowledge of its consequences.'

"Cities that formerly had nine or ten months' schooling annually may this year find it impossible to provide more than six or seven."

What a pity it is that Mr. Hoover did not inform himself regarding the setback to edgucation which this depression has brought before he assured the Congress that "there has been constant gain in knowledge and education" since the depression set in.

Possessed of accurate information about this vital question, he might have sounded a warning in his recent message that would have halted this raid by reckless Legislatures and school committees upon the rightful heritage of our youth.

Instead of rendering a public service of this source, however, Mr. Hoover's inaccurate information misled him and caused him, unintentionally, but none the less unfortunately, to lull Congress and the country into A SENSE OF FALSE SECURITY regarding the present plight of public education.

Hoover-Mellon Tax Plan A Handicap to Business

By B. C. Forbes

When a wagon or motor becomes stuck in the mud it takes far more force to extract it than it takes to keep the vehicle going once it starts. Likewise, far more power is necessary to start a heavy train moving than is necessary to keep it going once it gets under way.

American prosperity is stuck in the mud. The supreme objective of the government and of every responsible citizen must be to get things moving again.

The Hoover-Mellon tax proposals are not calculated to move business off its dead center and start it moving forward.

What is the wisest course for Congress to pursue under present depressing circumstances?

Surely the supreme objective should be to induce business to begin to move. The taxation burdens recommended by the administration are altogether too heavy. They are not calculated to stimulate a business and industrial advance. Rather are they likely to push industry and employment deeper into the mire.

Authorities state that the government in recent years has reduced its obligations by $3,500,000,000 more than necessary. Secretary Mellon doubtless was wise to reduce the public debt drastically while the nation was enjoying a boom.

But should not the administration completely alter its action now that progress is at a standstill and things are going the wrong way?

Why should not taxation burdens be lightened to the utmost? Why should not taxpayers now receive the full benefit of their excess payments of $3,500,000,000?

"Pay as you go" is ordinarily a sound policy. If we, as taxpayers, had done nothing more than meet absolutely necessary obligations during our years of prosperity, then it would have been fair enough to call upon us to make national ends meet now. But we anticipated our obligations to the tune of three and a half billions.

Having done this, are we not entitled, now that we are struggling to keep solvent, to credit for our excess payments?

The main objective of the government and everybody else should be not to increase the load now that prosperity and business are stuck in the mire, but to do everything possible to get a forward movement started.

That can best be done by lightening our load, not aggravating it.

In plain language, the government should not hesitate to ease our present grievous burdens by raising part of our national financial needs by issuing bonds. Having laid up $3,500,000,000 of "fat," why not draw substantially upon it during these lamentably lean days?

If prosperity can be set in motion it will be relatively easy for taxpayers to meet all governmental demands.

Is it not very clear, therefore, that our statesmen should go to the limit of practicability in encouraging the resumption of activity?

Faced with a presidential election, the administration will commit suicide if it insists upon inflicting needlessly embarrassing burdens upon taxpayers during the coming year. The Democratic party, anxious to ascend the seat of power, has already intimated that the Hoover-Mellon tax recommendations are altogether too heavy to be borne under present harassing conditions.

Would it not be logical to reason that the party whose tax plans appeal most to the public is likely to be the party favored at the polls next November by taxpayers?
